The Gradient tool is a selection brush and is used to select portions of an image where it will apply a smooth, gradual color change. Gradient tools are very useful for creating soft gradients in a photo. Gradients can be used to soften the edges of objects, such as fences or walls, and even landscapes. Parasitology of the north-central West Bank of Israel. Soil and 1.5 L of water were collected from 19 sites located in four villages in the north-central part of the West Bank. The prevalence of pathogenic helminths and metazoans was determined from 28,000 adult specimens of rodents, reptiles, and amphibians found in these samples. No cases of serious helminth infection were found. Trematode eggs from Anisakis, a fish-eating nematode, were found in the samples. One dipteran larva of Acrobelooides skrijabini, a snail-eating nematode, was found in the samples. Four species of monogeneans (Ligophorus, Phenacostomum, Microcotyle, Cichlidogyrus), three species of trematode cercariae (Schistosoma sp. 1, Schistosoma sp. 2, and Onchocerca sp.), and 13 species of nematode larvae were recovered from rodents. The tsunami of last week's media coverage, political opinion, and blog commentary about internet "censorship" in Australia has quite rightly been enormous. I'm a strong supporter of the uncensored internet, which is why I've lobbied for so long for an uncensored media in Australia. But I'm also a strong supporter of free speech and hate speech laws and against anything which smothers genuine public debate or discussion about ideas. So, while I'm happy that the Australian Broadcasting Authority and The Guardian Australia have used this as an opportunity to engage people in the issues, I want to take issue with what I see as some of the extreme rhetoric being used. The role of the commercial media I'm not on one side of a debate, and the other, I think the ABP and Guardian have made that very clear. I do strongly support the principle of a "we're all on the same team" attitude on this. I also want to say clearly that I very much support the independence of the press. I am not calling for censorship. But I am calling for a healthy, honest, civil debate about what's right and what's wrong, and how the balance of that debate is covered and covered
